Knowledge Repository News

Among the nearly 50 new entries in the Knowledge Repository, several papers focus on therapeutic and restorative environments for both patients and healthcare workers. A study by Lorusso and colleagues focuses on staff break areas, and while the researchers were interested in the concept of restoration, they discovered how nurses are actually using their break time. A study by Hauge and colleagues focused on therapy for child and adolescent patients and examines the restorative effect of an outdoor care retreat situated next to a Norwegian hospital. Wilson and colleagues examine the link between the mental health environment and a sense of physical, procedural, and relational security focused on both patients and staff. See below the citations listed in the "Supportive Design" and "Therapeutic Environments" categories.

(Papers published ahead of print "in press" will be updated as volume and page information becomes available.)
